NIKOLA TESLA Energy Independence Celebrations 2011

July 7th, 8th, 9th & 10th in Philadelphia, PA

Nikola Tesla was a Serbian inventor and scientist who was born on midnight between July 9th and 10th, 1856, in the village of Smiljan of the Austrian Empire, which is in modern-day Croatia. He has been referred to as the Father of the Electrical Age for his discoveries in Alternating Current and the invention of the AC Generator.

Near the turn of the 20th Century, Tesla's Alternating Current technology became the standard for electrical power transmission. Through this extraordinary innovation, Tesla sparked the Second Industrial Revolution and made it possible for electricity to be carried into our homes in the form that we know and use it today. Tesla also invented the wireless transmission technology upon which Radio is based, and as such, he is recognized today as the true Inventor of Radio.

Tesla worked tirelessly to help move humanity forward. He felt that science and innovation should be pursued with one primary goal in mind at all times: the betterment of humanity. At this critical juncture in human history, we recognize a moral imperative to initiate the development of the New Energy technologies that Tesla envisioned for the world, but which were, unfortunately, not realized during his lifetime. The successful implementation of Tesla's unfinished work would be a giant leap forward in creating a new sustainable energy paradigm for the entire world.

The mission of the Nikola Tesla Energy Independence Celebrations is to create greater public awareness of Nikola Tesla and his world-changing innovations. Through this event, we will bring together and inspire like-minded innovators and enthusiasts to advance Tesla's legacy as the Father of Free Energy and Free Communications, and to work toward bringing Tesla's vision for these technologies to fruition for the benefit of all.
